Founder & CEO, Enble AI
AI Educator, Innovator and Builder

"AI is not a gadget. It is a way of working that compounds. My job on stage is to show it, not tell it, so your audience leaves with confidence"

Tam Galahena is an AI educator, innovator, and builder who turns potential into practical advantage. He helps growth-minded organisations lift people, streamline processes, and use AI to launch new offerings and serve new markets. The goal is simple: turn curiosity into measurable results. Based in Melbourne and working across Australia, he partners with SMEs, associations, councils, and not-for-profits that want capability and innovate.

Previously, Tam co-founded TriumphEd, an ed-tech startup addressing a AU$15B higher-ed challenge, securing $300k in pre-seed funding and building AI-powered software before launching Enble. He believes AI is reshaping how business is done and that success means embracing it, specially where organisations lack in-house bandwidth. His sessions are demo-rich, and impossible to ignore. He makes AI accessible to non-technical teams, showing how to apply it far beyond email and summaries – from strategy and design to innovation and decision-making.

On stage Tam works live with AI so audiences can see ideas take shape in real time. The result is a clear path from show to do to measure, with teams leaving ready to use what they have learned that same day.

“A short yet in-depth session on explaining AI powers that can be leveraged to business growth.”
